Bonds and Treasury Bills

The FGN Bond average yield closed bearish at 10.25% compared to 9.22% that was recorded on the 28th of February 2020. The average yield went up by 103bps Week on Week. Most of the expansion was seen in Mar-2025 (324bps), Mar-2024 (267bps) and Apr-2023. Following the Senate's approval of Buhari's $22.7 billion loan request, we expect to see sell pressure on 2049 FGN Bond as the new loan approval has piqued up concerns from local investors.

In contrast, the T-bills secondary market closed on a bearish note as average yield went down by 1bps to close at 4.00% from 4.01% WoW. This could be as a result of the rush to sell off securities by offshore investors as NTB is switched for OMO bills at more profitable yields.

At the OMO auction held during the week, the apex bank (CBN) sold a total of ₦110.51 billion worth of bills on the 362-DTM tenor. Subscription was weak at 1.12x - the lowest since mid-February. The stop rate dropped from 13% from the last auction on 27th February 2020 to 12.99%. The 82-DTM and 180-DTM had no sales.

Oil Prices

OPEC met on Thursday and revealed plans to slash its production quota by 1.5 million barrels per day through the second quarter of the year. The proposed cuts will be conditional on Russia's agreement. The cartel is meeting in Vienna in an effort to stabilize prices on the heels of a demand slowdown sparked by the Coronavirus (COVID-19) epidemic.

However, the FGN has announced plans to review the 2020 budget as oil revenue comes under severe pressure following the rampaging impact of the COVID-19 on oil price.
